The month in brief

September 2026 brought modest movement in cybersecurity legislation, with 12 bills changing stage and three new laws enacted. Federal activity dominated: eight of the twelve bills that moved were in Congress, including five reported out of committee and three that passed one chamber. California enacted two laws, one authorizing the Office of Elections Cybersecurity to consult with academic researchers and assess resource needs, and another directing that cybersecurity skills be considered in computer science curriculum standards. Delaware enacted an amendment to its computer security breach statute. Four Maryland laws take effect October 1, 2026: two addressing interference with critical infrastructure and public safety answering points, and two requiring updates to the statewide information technology master plan.
